Out-of-state special interests are spending MAGA millions to put their agenda on your Colorado ballot.

Hunting and fishing are already legal in Colorado.¹

So why does a far-right extremist national group want to rewrite our Constitution with a so-called “right to hunt and fish”? Because Amendment 83 would lock outdated policies into the Colorado Constitution, silencing voters, lawmakers and wildlife professionals.

Coloradans should decide our own future. Don't let special interests lock us out of our Constitution.

HIKING WITH YOUR DOG OR KIDS ON COLORADO'S PUBLIC TRAILS?

Steel-jaw traps can't tell a fox from your dog. Colorado banned them on public lands in 1996. Amendment 83 could bring them back to the trails you hike.

What you should know about Amendment 83:

1. It would elevate hunting and fishing over all other public land uses. Amendment 83 gives constitutional preference to hunting and fishing over everything else.²

2. It includes vague,³ undefined language.

Amendment 83 talks about "traditional methods," but it doesn't define what that means. The people behind similar "right to hunt" amendments have used this same language as a way to bring back practices Colorado has already outlawed, such as cruel traps, bear baiting and hounding.

3. It's backed by out-of-state trophy-hunting groups. The backers of Amendment 83 pursue similar constitutional amendments around the country, with a stated goal of establishing constitutional hunting rights to "lock the door" behind them, in their own words.⁴

A CHANGE TO

Your vote can help protect Colorado's Constitution

and keep decisions about Colorado's wildlife and public safety in the hands of Colorado voters, wildlife experts, elected officials, and communities.

Our Constitution belongs to all Coloradans, not out-of-state special interests pushing a national agenda.
